“ I meet Barry when I started 10th grade at Pickens High School. He became my protector. One of my favorite memories of Barry was the time other boys were picking on me and pulling up my dress. I was very shy back then. Well Barry would have none of it. So he took the boy and dump him into the trash can head first. Then I found out he had a crush on me. Well he invited me to the future farmers of America banquet. I agreed to go with him as a friend .

I am not sure if this next part was just Barrys doing or if the others were in on it. But he told me it was a formal wear event. So I wore a yellow prom like dress. He showed up with a corsage for me to wear. My mom took pictures. We got the the Banquet and it was NOT FORMAL WEAR. Barry swore he was told it was. While smiling from ear to ear. I learn then how to tell when he was fibbing. He would get such a huge grin and would kind of laugh with it. Well all the old people thought it was sooo sweet.. I kept kicking Barry in the leg under the table all night. Oh I wanted to kill him that night. But it made for a great laugh and story for years to come. We had our differences but we also had our good times Barry taught me a lot and showed me parts of the world I never knew before. For that I thank him. I also thank him for a wonderful handsome caring son Gregg Reeves. I know Barry was proud of Gregg. And honestly I was proud of Barry these past few years. I am so sad that he has been taken from us . You will be truly missed Barry.
Love always, Tammy
