I met Tracy and Phil, a little less than a year ago, in Myrtle Beach. We spent several hours together; we connected in friendship and continued growing our friendship.

I learned that day that Phil and Tracy were a committed, loyal and caring couple. They had a solid love. They were there for each other . I respected that so much about them. I found Phil to be kind, concerned about others and a wise man. He was interesting and funny; it was a good afternoon, even though Phil seemed to be a person of fewer words than both Tracy and I!

I am so sorry for this very tough loss, Tracy. I count it an honor that Christ brought us into each others' lives. Tracy, I'm so thankful that you, Phil and I were able to spend that beautiful afternoon together. I am glad he came with you! You know...

My prayers continue for you and your family.

The pictorial tribute to Phil is beautiful. I learned more about him through the memorial.

Remember, Philip is now part of the great cloud of witnesses. He is cheering you, Tyler and the family on.

May God bless you and your family, Tracy, with more mercy, peace and love, as well as guidance, especially during this difficult time.

Rest in peace, Philip Marshall Armstrong. You will be missed.

Love,

Anne Johnson
