“ I met Teddie for the first time at Thanksgiving this past year. Her smile was so warm and friendly. We shared several laughs over dinner and playing games that night. I'm so glad I was able to meet her, we share several interests! She has a creative mind and I would've loved to talk to her more. The one day I met her was enough to know she is extremely caring, loving and smart. She definitely loves her pups, and they love her.

Teddie, you've been heavy on my mind. I know you won't read this but I wish I knew you better. It's a tragedy, and your sweet soul is now free. I wish I could've taken your worries from you. Until we meet again.

“ Ten days without you. It doesn't feel real. It definitely doesn't feel right. How do I navigate this world without my sister? I hope you know how much I love you, how much I've always loved you. Losing you feels like losing a limb but somehow worse. I see you everywhere. My only comfort is knowing you are free from suffering. I miss you and love you with every atom of my being.

“ a family reunion in 1988 at my Mom's house comes to mind. Your Mom, Donna, and I both had new babies. Mine born in November of 86, you born September of 87. The two of you were so cute together. Years go by and the babies grow up and family members don't see each other as often. Life takes over. I know you will be missed by many. My heart aches for them.
